San Huberto Lodge on the Malleo River

I first traveled to Argentina four decades ago. For 40 years I've fished, guided, and hosted groups of fly fishermen at a myriad of locations in Patagonia.

The Olsen family's lodge, San Huberto, remains one of our favorites. Every year Lisa and I depart, believing that the experience couldn't possibly be better... and yet, the next season always reveals new improvements. The Olsen family and their staff are uncompromising in their pursuit of excellence, and continue to refine and improve every aspect of what they offer. The food, the accommodations, the fishing program, and the incredibly high level of service at San Huberto have to be experienced to be believed.

The lodge accommodates just 12 fishermen that, within the boundaries of the ranch, have access to 22 miles of the Malleo River, a beautiful free stone spring creek, and a remote high mountain lake. Additionally, when conditions are favorable, there is the opportunity to float a remote section of one of the area's larger rivers.

SAN HUBERTO LODGE

Within the boundaries of the Olsen family ranch, San Huberto Lodge has access to over twenty miles of the famous Malleo River, and an extraordinary spring creek. The Malleo and its tributary, the Huaca Mamuil provide countless opportunities for the wading fisherman to stalk and catch rainbow and brown trout up to twenty-four inches on dry flies and nymphs.

Guests staying at San Huberto also enjoy private access to a high mountain lake on the Chilean frontier. Lago Tromen, which is the source of the Malleo River, is fished comfortably from boats using floating lines and dry flies. Fishermen target rainbows, browns, and brook trout that cruise the shaded and rocky shorelines in search of aquatic insects and terrestrials.

Given favorable conditions, fishermen also have the opportunity to float and fish on a very remote stretch of the larger Alumine River. These floats can be managed as day trips, returning to the lodge in the evening, or a very comfortable over-night camp can be utilized to experience a night on the river under a star-filled sky.
